Ocean freight in Import/Export

Target Group

- Managers and employees from the shipping/logistics department
- Managers and employees who work in Import/Export (overseas markets)
- Employees from forwarding agents
- Freight purchasing
- All who want to increase their knowledge around the topic of sea freight

Background & Objective

Container shipping was and is the engine of globalization! What began in the 1960s with 200 TEU ships has culminated today in container ships of gigantic dimensions of up to 24,000 containers.

If you want to handle overseas business successfully, it is necessary to know the risks of a container transport, to control them and thus to reduce error costs and to win satisfied overseas customers!

In this seminar you get practical knowledge about overseas transport in containers. In addition to special features of the mode of transport and individual markets, you also learn about the liabilities and functions of the bill of lading. You learn how to use the correct ocean freight Incoterms® 2020 and what is important to know when purchasing ocean freight services, thus obtaining a clear freight cost calculation.

What risks are your products faced to on the high seas? Protect your goods with packaging and transport insurance and take the right measures in the event of damage. By complying with international packaging guidelines for wooden packaging, you can avoid delays or confiscation by the authorities. The loading risk is often underestimated! As a shipper you are - in the absence of any other agreement - responsible for defective loading in the container and the resulting damage.

Efficient cooperation with the freight forwarder: What processes take place in freight forwarding companies and how does the cooperation work? More knowledge reduces error costs due to misunderstandings. Get to know your partner better.

Because only those who know their risks can control them and take targeted countermeasures.
