EDITOR’S LETTER

Welcome to this latest edition of Trade Exchange. As ever, we are excited to share with you our news, achievements and successful projects. One we are especially pleased to tell you about is our recent historic signing of a trade finance line for a private Turkmen bank, which you can read about in the news section on page 7.

Over the last few months our networking and information sessions have reached out to many in a wide range of locations such as Cyprus, Kiev, Morocco, Tbilisi and Vienna!

One of the main highlights of the year took place in Georgia at the TFP’s Annual Event and Awards Ceremony in May. Turn to page 10 for a list of the most active issuing and confirming banks in 2014, and a photo report of the ceremony.

We were also fortunate to receive contributions from Europe’s leading trade finance specialists. On page 20, Ruth Wandhofer takes us through her most recent publication and explains the ins and outs of transaction banking and the impact of regulatory change. And Philipp Rossberg, COO of the German ECA, presents on page 22 an interesting view on why times are tough for international traders and financiers, and looks at how institutions, such as the EBRE, and export credit agencies can work together to provide long-term stability.

As the world focuses more and more on investing in small and medium-sized enterprises, we asked our pioneering Taiwanese colleagues to share their innovative ideas about women’s involvement in entrepreneurial businesses (page 16). And on page 18 you can find out how women-led businesses get a boost in Turkey with the help of a ground-breaking new product developed by the EBRD.

We would also like to take this opportunity to thank our partner banks for appreciating our hard work and voting for us to win two awards from Euromoney’s’ Trade Finance Awards in 2015. It is a humbling acknowledgement of our work.

Finally, don’t forget to send us your answers for the trade finance Clinic “Conflict over conflict” on page 31 and share your opinions with the experts on Twitter: @kmakhmudova. May the year 2016 be happy and peaceful for all of us!

Rebalancing finance

Opinion

“An investment gap is casting a serious shadow over the region’s long-term growth prospects... To boost investment and close that gap, new funding sources need to be explored. Indeed, this report suggests that the challenge is not only to increase the quantity of finance that is available to firms and households, but also to rebalance its composition and improve its quality.”

Hans Peter Lankes, Acting Chief Economist, EBRD

This year’s Transition Report, available online and in print, takes an in-depth look at the types of finance the transition region requires to move towards sustainable growth.

In the post-crisis era, growth in the region has come to a virtual standstill. As a result, there is little convergence with advanced countries and the report concludes that the region requires a variety of funding sources, as well as structural reform, to address the investment gap that currently exists.

It’s all a question of balance

The report assesses the balance between debt and equity financing, between foreign currency and local currency finance and between external and domestic funding. In particular, the report assesses in detail the role of private equity as a form of growth capital in the EBRD’s countries of operations. It also looks at whether the balance is right between public, household and corporate debt.

Finally, the report considers how the balance between traditional western European foreign direct investment and funding from further-flung regions might be improved.

The effect that this EBRD-funded training course has had on the Ukrainian banking sector is formidable; over 250 Ukrainian bankers have received scholarships and completed their trade finance training.

That’s more than 350 people bringing new skills and knowledge to the country’s trade finance market, helping local banks to increase foreign trade and ultimately get the country’s economy back on track.

Sevki Acuner, EBRD Director for Ukraine, said: “We are very pleased to conduct another successful trade finance event in Ukraine. It shows the importance of this instrument for the national economy and the country’s ability to trade, and it contributes greatly to banking sector development. The e-Learning Programme organised by the Bank’s TFP team helps improve the level of professionalism among local bankers and provides them with necessary know-how to conclude the most sophisticated transactions.”

Conducting trade in difficult times

The conference entitled “Ukraine: Trade Finance 2015” took place on 1 and 2 October 2015. It was co-organised by the EBRD TFP team and World Wide Expert Conferences, and hosted by the International Chamber of Commerce (ICC) and the EBRD’s partner banks.

While Ukraine is going through a challenging period of tough reforms and volatility, trade finance remains one of the most important parts of banking activity.

The conference examined the difficulties that banks and corporates are facing when structuring trade finance deals in the current economic situation.

Apart from the regular business agenda, the conference also provided plenty of networking opportunities where participants could exchange ideas in a more informal setting, strengthening business connections between Ukrainian and international professionals and helping them to find new reliable business partners. The TFP has been key in equipping local banks with an important financial instrument that will help them to strengthen their capacity in trade finance and give local small businesses the support they need to increase foreign trade.

The choice of Kiev as a host city for the 2015 trade finance event was not surprising given Ukraine’s active history with the TFP. Since its inception in 2001 the TFP has supported over 1,800 trade transactions worth over €2 billion. Fifteen Ukrainian banks have been engaged in trade transactions under the TFP umbrella – transactions that cover a variety of deals ranging from the export of locally manufactured cranies to Uzbekistan to the import of bottling equipment from Hungary, as well as goods from further afield such as Argentina, New Zealand and Vietnam. To date, the TFP in Ukraine has reached a turnover of €130 million through 120 transactions.

The conference also set the stage for the EBRD Trade Finance e-Learning Programme graduation ceremony. Almost 100 banking professionals from all over Ukraine completed their trade finance training organised by the EBRD. The Bank’s senior management, together with the ICC Banking Commission Paris, presented certificates to the Ukrainian graduates at the ceremony.

The effect that this EBRD-funded training course has had on the Ukrainian banking sector is formidable; over 250 Ukrainian bankers have received scholarships and completed their trade finance training. That’s more than 350 people bringing new skills and knowledge to the country’s trade finance market, helping local banks to increase foreign trade and ultimately get the country’s economy back on track.

Sevki Acuner, EBRD Director for Ukraine, said: “We are very pleased to conduct another successful trade finance event in Ukraine. EBRD signs first deal with private Turkmen bank

US$ 1 million will help this fast-growing private bank promote cross-border trade

The EBRD is boosting support for cross-border trade in Turkmenistan with its first regional trade finance facility for a private bank in the country.

Rysgal Bank will receive an uncommitted multi-currency trade finance facility of up to US$ 1 million under the TFP.

Rysgal Bank is a small but dynamically growing bank in Turkmenistan where the banking sector is dominated by state-owned commercial banks. This will make it easier for Rysgal’s corporate clients to export and import goods and also to distribute foreign goods locally. The guarantees cover transactions in a range of foreign currencies.

The EBRD will also benefit from training under the EBRD’s Trade Finance e-Learning Programme plus face-to-face seminars on trade facilitation products and factoring, as well as fraud protection and risk management.

Rudolf Putz, Head of the Trade Facilitation Programme, said: “The signing of Rysgal Bank represents an important next step in developing our support for banks in Turkmenistan. I am both excited and encouraged to see this milestone reached and look forward to working with Rysgal Bank in the coming years.”

“I believe that the start of our relationship with Rysgal Bank is extremely important for supporting further development of the private sector in Turkmenistan.”

NEWS UPDATE _INDUSTRY AWARDS

MULTIPLE AWARD WINNER 2015

EBRD wins Euromoney trade finance award

“The EBRD has won the Euromoney Trade Finance magazine’s award for Best Global Multilateral/Developmental Financial Institution for the third year running, despite stiff competition and a challenging economic and political environment. This prestigious award recognises the outstanding work of the TFP team on promoting foreign trade to, from and among the countries where the EBRD invests.”

“This award means a lot because it is voted on by more than 10,000 readers all over the world, so it is a real reflection of the value that the EBRD brings to clients,” says Kamola Makhmudova, TFP Senior Banker. “And although the EBRD does not have a global mandate, we were awarded the global award, which is a huge achievement.”

The EBRD also won the Trade Finance award for Best Developmental Financial Institution in Europe. Both awards were presented to the Bank at a prize ceremony on 10 June 2015.

“We have been stepping up our support for clients in this difficult economic environment and expanding our mandate to new countries and markets,” says Mario Blindi, TFP Principal Banker. “Our partners really appreciate this and the technical assistance we provide, for example through our e-Learning Programme.”

Almost 3,000 specialists from 187 issuing banks across the Bank’s countries of operations have participated in the donor-funded e-Learning Programme since its launch in 2010. The Programme helps participants achieve best international practice in trade finance.
The Trade Facilitation Programme (TFP) holds its annual award ceremonies at the EBRD’s Annual Meeting to honour the most active issuing and confirming banks involved in the Programme. The winners are determined based on the number of guarantee transactions in the previous year. This year’s TFP Event and Awards Ceremony took place on 13 May 2015 in Tbilisi, Georgia, the day before the EBRD Annual Meeting and Business Forum.

The event attracted over 300 bankers and trade finance specialists. Awards were presented by Nick Tesseyman, Managing Director for Financial Institutions at the EBRD, and Ambassador Chih-Kung Liu, Head of the Taipei Representative office in the United Kingdom.

This year’s TFP Annual Event and Awards Ceremony could not have happened without generous Taiwanese support, and funding from our sponsor TBC Bank Georgia.

TFP DEAL OF THE YEAR

A small, specialist project to bring in artificial snowmaking equipment, transforming Georgia’s winter holiday season, was the 2014 TFP Deal of the Year.

Tourism generates around US$ 1.7 billion a year for Georgia and provides 10 per cent of the country’s employment. However, a lack of snow during the 2013-14 ski season meant that Georgia’s two main ski resorts of Gudauri and Bakuriani suffered heavy losses, threatening further losses to the country’s economy.

So a deal was put together to finance the import of artificial snowmaking equipment from Austria. TBC Bank provided a confirmed letter of credit (LC) for €2.28 million to cover the import of the machines and the LC was confirmed and post-financed by Raiffeisen Bank Austria (RZB). TBC’s obligations were covered by the EBRD’s standby LC under the TFP.

The project demonstrated how an LC supporting an artificial snowmaking project could bring about such a transformation. After a four-month construction period, the 2014-15 ski season opened with artificial snow (as natural snowfall had been scarce), along with 85 per cent of all hotels in Gudauri having been booked through to the end of January 2015.

The Taiwanese government supports women entrepreneurs not just domestically but also in the EBRD’s countries of operations

Su Hsiu-lien is exactly the sort of female entrepreneur that the Taiwanese government is aiming to support. When she set up her organic farm in a rural area in the eastern part of the island, she was a computer novice. But thanks to a computer training course offered by the government she now operates the business via email and the internet, having transformed it into a profitable business. The computers not only enabled her to increase production and open up sales channels, but they also created a future for Ms Su’s female employees, who also received information and communications technology (ICT) training.

PROMOTING INCLUSION
Ms Su’s story shows how ICT can really benefit entrepreneurs setting up businesses in rural areas.

And empowering women so that they can participate fully in the economy is something the Taiwanese government is committed to, because it recognizes that a gender-balanced economy is a key driver of growth. At the latest Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) conference held in the Philippines on 16 September 2015, the Taiwanese led a one-day seminar entitled “Empowering Women through Information Communications Technology for Inclusive Growth”.

The seminar was part of the Innovation for Growth”. Women and Economic Development project in collaboration with Australia, Chile, South Korea and the Philippines. The Taiwanese Minister without Portfolio, Joyce Yen Feng, said during her opening speech: “The flourishing development of ICT and other innovations has made up for insufficiencies in internet infrastructure and location discrepancies, thereby boosting marketing pathways for women-owned microbusinesses, and small and medium-sized enterprises.”

She continued: “It is important that women be encouraged to use ICT tools to build up digital capabilities, establish business networks and form corporate alliances.”

INITIATIVES
Two Taiwanese initiatives in particular support women entrepreneurs: the Micro-Business Startup Phoenix Programme (set up in 2007), which provides women entrepreneurs with low-interest, guarantor- and collateral-free loans; and the Flying Goose Programme (established in 2002), which provides financial and knowledge-based assistance for women who want to start up a new business.

By June 2014 these two programmes had provided loans totalling €70 million and offered more than 1,100 training courses nationwide on computer, management and marketing skills, attracting approximately 98,000 participants. So far these initiatives have helped 12,000 women establish their own businesses, not only achieving greater equality in the economy but also generating a further 3,300 jobs for the wider society.

SUPPORTING THE EBRD WOMEN IN BUSINESS PROGRAMME
As well as encouraging its own women entrepreneurs, the Taiwanese government also supports the EBRD’s efforts to promote female economic inclusion, namely through the Bank’s Women in Business Programme in the Western Balkans and the Caucasus. The Taiwanese are generously providing not only the funds (€1.25 million) for technical assistance, but also the people with the know-how. For example, in 2013 successful Taiwanese businesswoman Cathy Chin, Managing Director of UPLAS Information Corp, presented e-business courses under the Women in Business Programme in the Western Balkans, sharing her expertise and personal experience of running a modern business.

So by giving all these women entrepreneurs – Ms Chin and Ms Su included – access to financing and business know-how, they can unlock their potential and help to drive economic growth forward.

This article is based on two articles from Taiwan Review published in October 2013 and September 2015 http://taiwantoday.tw

Women entrepreneurship plays a key role in creating jobs and driving economic growth, which is why the EBRD runs its Women in Business programmes. The latest programme to be launched was in Turkey.

The Turkish business environment can be a tough one for women; with just 33.1 per cent participation rate in the workforce, women are extremely under-represented, and only 1.2 per cent of these women are employees. They face certain challenges when trying to access the finance and know-how required to establish and grow their businesses.

The financing gap in particular is a major obstacle. The lack of adequate finance, particularly in relation to short tenors or excessive collateralisation, coupled with fewer opportunities to gain managerial experience, tends to restrict women-led businesses to the micro and small segments, typically in low value-added, low productivity sectors.

A UNIQUE PROGRAMME

To address these challenges, the EBRD launched the Turkey Finance and Advice for Women in Business Programme in October 2014. It is the first of its kind in Turkey and aims to strengthen the role of female entrepreneurs in the economy.

The programme also offers a new web-based diagnostic tool, entitled “Business Lens”, for women-led SMEs. This tool has been developed to help women better understand their business operations and examine both strategic and operational aspects of the management process. The assessment examines the competencies of respondents in seven distinct areas:

- Financial management and performance
- Market knowledge
- Marketing and sales
- Human resources
- Strategy and organisation
- Risk management
- Operations

BUSINESS LENS

Through a detailed questionnaire, Business Lens provides a score in these seven areas, and the overall score, which is based on a weighted average, gives an indication of how well the business is managed. In addition to this, the Business Lens also generates a financial report that contains all the information banks need when an entrepreneur wants to get a loan application started. The report also contains additional information supporting the loan application.

STRONG INTEREST FROM BANKS

Six Turkish local banks – Finansbank, GarantiBank, IsBank, VakifBank, TEB and VakifBank – expressed an interest in joining the programme by way of signing Letters of Intent. To date, the EBRD has signed agreements with four – VakifBank (US$ 35 million); Finansbank (US$ 50 million); IsBank (US$ 55 million); and TEB (US$ 60 million). TEB and Finansbank have already started on-lending to eligible SMEs, and IsBank and VakifBank will begin once they have completed the necessary assessments.

REGIONAL SEMINARS

The programme also offers a series of regional Women in Business seminars. At least 15 have been planned in order to reach at least 2,000 women-led SMEs and female entrepreneurs.

In-depth

Online marketing? We know how!

With the help of the EBRD, a Turkish woman-led car rental and private transportation company – Dog’s Car – has been able to expand its customer range via online marketing. The EBRD’s local consultant worked with the company to manage a new, fully equipped e-booking website. The new website uses the latest online technology to allow customers to select their rental car directly. There is a gallery where they can view the different cars available, and they can book and pay online.

As a result of this stronger online presence, the business was able to increase its turnover by 29 per cent within a year, making new potential customers who would never have known the existence of such a company. They’re also taken on two new employees and are seen to work with a consultant again in the future.
The global economy continues a fundamental transformation following the financial crisis of 2007-09, which triggered a significant decline in world trade. To ensure the stability of financial institutions and prevent future crises of such scale, a raft of regulatory measures was developed, ranging from strengthening banks’ balance sheets to ring-fencing and trapping liquidity and capital in local balance sheets.

Against this background, it is important to understand the role of banks as enablers of trade finance, movement of money to understand the role of banks as enablers of trade finance, movement of money.

The book, Transaction Banking and the Impact of Regulatory Change: Basel III and Other Challenges for the Global Economy, provides the reader with a deep insight into what transaction banking delivers for the global economy and discusses how this area of banking business is being challenged by the ongoing global regulatory reform, while also proposing some practical approaches to solving these challenges.

The journey begins with an overview of a number of key regulatory developments, which the banking industry is in the process of complying with or adjusting to. Regulatory initiatives include the Basel III Accord, Recovery & Resolution Planning requirements, country approaches to Bank Structural Reform/Ring-fencing at a macro level, as well as additional G20 and more specific regulations including OTC derivatives trading and clearing rules, investor protection, shadow banking, consumer protection and global standardisation initiatives.

Case studies show how different transaction banking solutions offer practical support

The book examines options on how to solve the most prominent issue of our time, the “too big to fail” dilemma.

To conclude, the book examines options on how to solve the most prominent issue of our time, the “too big to fail” dilemma. Various factors ranging from accounting standards alignment to improved global disclosures, culture change and the need for enhanced supervision and regulator trust all form part of this discussion.

With regulatory change continuing its rapid pace, implications for banks are starting to become more apparent. From reduced returns to increased expense savings, a contraction of the loan book but increasing appetite for long-term deposits, global regulatory reform is reshaping the banking industry on a daily basis.

At the end of the regulatory reform journey banks will certainly have stronger balance sheets, which bring extra resilience. However, how much of this will be at the expense of the real economy and in how far risks may start to emerge in other areas outside the banking industry are worthwhile issues to ponder.

G lobal and regional trade continues to face many challenges. China’s economy is slowing, oil prices have been falling, and there are significant exchange rate volatilities and geopolitical crises. All this has led to a contraction of trade flows in 2015.

Such concerns increase the risks – be they real or perceived – associated with international trade as well as corresponding trade and export finance activities (the former being defined as having a short-term risk horizon and the latter as a medium to long-term risk horizon). In other words, waters for adventurous international traders and their financiers remain turbulent.

So it is in times like these that non-commercial market participants such as the EBRD and export credit agencies (ECAs) – including the German ECA, Hermes – can provide a solid bedrock of support. Here, the bedrock consists of the German export credit agency, Hermes.

A GLOBAL PORTFOLIO

Reflecting the strength and diversification of Germany’s national exporting industry, Hermes is one of the world’s largest ECAs. It currently administers a portfolio of roughly 10,000 single transactions (typically insurances and guarantees for medium to long-term loans issued in connection with the funding of capital expenditures) and 60,000 short-term trade finance limits (typically issued to cover short-term exporter receivables). Its annual underwriting activities amount to approximately €25 billion related to German exports and/or the financing thereof.

Many of the EBRD’s countries of operations are important export destinations for German companies. This is reflected in Hermes’ current portfolio, which sees three of the EBRD’s target markets ranked prominently in the 2014 underwriting top 10.

One of the leading positions is taken by Russia, which has consistently featured among the top three markets in recent years. In 2014, despite worsening economic circumstances in the country and the sanctions imposed by the European Union and United States, Hermes provided cover worth €2.2 billion, only a slight decrease on the previous year.

Another key market for German exports is Turkey, which, in terms of the existing risk on the books, has recently moved to the top spot with around €9.2 billion outstanding at the time of writing. Individual transactions supported in the country span a number of EBRD target sectors, such as health care (equipment for Turkish hospitals), industry (delivery for automotive plants) and above all, the renewable energy sector, where Hermes has supported 29 large projects (those of more than €30 million) since 2010. It is notable that many of these transactions were carried out via on-lending structures involving Turkish banks that are also active participants in the EBRD’s TFP.

A rather challenging market in 2014 has, without doubt, been Ukraine due to its dramatic political and economic developments which started at the end of 2013. Despite increased risks, Hermes remained open for cover during the year and supported new transactions totalling €317 million – more than 14 per cent of all German exports to the country.

COMPLEMENTARY INSTITUTIONS

Evidently there is significant geographical overlap between the activities of the German ECA and those of the EBRD. In terms of products, the TFP arguably provides the closest match to the instruments offered by the German ECA but the EBRD as a whole offers a broader variety of solutions that could be used in the context of projects supported by Hermes, such as local currency financing, local capital market issuances, equity or mezzanine investments in projects importing German equipment, and so on.

Consequently, although the guidelines within which both institutions operate are rather different, with Hermes being subject to a strict set of rules (for example, linking support to content requirements and imposing limits on total coverage) and the EBRD having a primarily developmental purpose and imposing its own limits on total coverage), there is plenty of opportunities to turn two solid but isolated rocks into one single bedrock of international trade.

Philippe Rosenberg is a Partner in PwC’s Finance & Regulation Advisory Practice and serves as Chief Operating Officer of the German ECA, which is jointly managed by Euler Hermes Aktiengesellschaft and PwC AG WPG.
Event brings together trade finance professionals and industry specialists, providing the backdrop for the first signing with a Cypriot bank

Current market conditions in Cyprus mean that local banks have insufficient trade finance facilities from foreign commercial banks, and as to finance foreign trade transactions they use either cash deposits held in foreign correspondent banks or security under trade finance facilities provided by international financial institutions. In response to a request from the Cypriot authorities, the EBRD will be investing in Cyprus to support reforms and a return to economic growth. The Bank will use its expertise to attract foreign correspondent banks or security under trade finance facilities provided by international financial institutions.

Part of this investment came on 1 July 2015 in the form of the country's first integration. The EBRD will use its expertise to attract foreign correspondent banks or security under trade finance facilities provided by international financial institutions.

Topics discussed covered the latest trends and developments in trade finance, including factoring and supply chain finance. The factoring business remains largely under-developed or non-existent in the EBRD regions (with the exception of a few countries). Leading specialists from factoring companies and organisations such as International Factors Group and International Trade and Forfaiting Association discussed the development of factoring in the EBRD region along with ways to provide companies with wider access to this source of financing.

To highlight the attractive investment opportunities in the southern and eastern Mediterranean (SEMED) region—and in Morocco in particular—the EBRD organised a Trade and Investment Forum in Casablanca on 3 June 2015. Participants learned about the EBRD’s programmes and activities that support investors, strengthen the local economy and boost cross-border trade and cooperation. Laurent Chabrier, EBRD Director for Morocco, opened the event with an overview of the Bank’s activities in Morocco, focusing on how to do business with the Bank and commenting: “Our capacity to invest in projects and to reform the business environment relies on the investors and entrepreneurs in Morocco.”

Adil Chikhi, EBRD Director for Industry, Commerce and Agribusiness in the SEMED region, presented the Bank’s products and services and outlined current projects in property and tourism, manufacturing and services as well as agribusiness.

Meriem Zairi, member of the Confédération Générale des Entreprises du Maroc (CGEM) – Commission on Relations Banque-Entreprises spoke about Morocco’s competitive advantages in terms of trade and investment in private companies and, in particular, small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs).

Other sessions focused on the EBRD’s advice to small businesses, consultancy opportunities and a detailed sector overview of the Bank’s activities in Morocco.

In the afternoon attendees learned about the EBRD’s Trade Facilitation Programme (TFP), especially its recent activities in SEMED. Representatives of local and foreign banks discussed the financing of imports to Morocco and looked at how local and foreign banks can support the import of energy-efficient technologies with the help of the TFP.

Morocco is a founding member of the EBRD and became a country in which the Bank invests in 2012. To date the Bank has invested €473 million in 18 projects across the country, in addition to €130 million of TFP credit lines with local banks. The EBRD has also provided technical assistance to more than 135 local SMEs.
GERMANY CALLING

Back in 2013 Kamel Eddine Limem of Amen Bank Tunisia successfully completed the EBRD Trade Finance e-Learning Programme. As a reward for his efforts, Kamel was invited to Landesbank Baden-Württemberg’s offices in Germany for some exclusive training.

I’d never done distance learning before but the EBRD Trade Finance e-Learning Programme was a very good place to start. Not only was the course interesting, it was also extremely practical and provided me with many useful case studies in addition to the theoretical lessons. But the best was yet to come – in LBBW’s offices in Germany.

The first part of my training was in Stuttgart. Here I met LBBW relationship managers responsible for various regions around the world. It was fascinating to learn about the specifics of banking with each region, and I particularly enjoyed my discussions with the North Africa relationship manager about how to improve working with Tunisian banks. My final port of call in Stuttgart was to LBBW’s capital markets department. It was amazing to see hundreds of professional traders pooling their efforts in the interest of the bank.

From Stuttgart I then travelled on to Mannheim, home of LBBW’s trade finance department. It was very useful to see how things worked in a bank in an advanced country such as Germany and I came away with many ideas which I hope to implement in Amen Bank.

During this second part of the training I significantly improved my knowledge of trade finance and discovered a whole range of new services and financial products that could help me provide a better service to Amen Bank’s customers. It was a fantastic opportunity to meet exceptional bankers collaborating in a very efficient organisation.

Some great extra-curricular activities, such as visiting the Mercedes Cup (the biggest tennis tournament in Germany), the Mercedes Benz museum and LBBW’s own numismatic department, provided the icing on the cake and made my experience in Germany not just good, but perfect.

I want to say a big thank you to Amen Bank, LBBW and the EBRD for offering me this unique opportunity.

OPPORTUNITIES ABOUND

Radhouane Houria of Banque Tuniso-Koweitienne won first prize as a 2014 graduate of the EBRD Trade Finance e-Learning Programme. Here he tells us about his award of an internship at Commerzbank and attendance at a trade finance seminar.

Back in 2011 I signed up for the EBRD Trade Finance e-Learning Programme. The various modules were extremely interesting, especially the case studies, but no one can say it was easy – a required dedication and hard work! However, my hard work paid off because, to my delight, I was not just one of the top 25 graduates, but I also received first prize! My reward came in the form of attending a seminar on sustainable trade, and two internships with Commerzbank – one in Frankfurt and one in Paris. The seminar which took place in Frankfurt’s impressive Gallileo building, was entitled “Pushing progress on sustainable trade”. Participants came from many different countries such as Bangladesh, Belgium, FRR Macedonia, Indonesia, Oman and Russia, so it was a great opportunity for me to mix with other cultures. But wherever we came from, we all had the same aim of developing and promoting sustainable trade, although much of our work in this area takes place behind the scenes.

The second part of the training was a one-day internship at Commerzbank’s head office and a one-day internship at Commerzbank’s Paris branch. In the head office I had the chance to see how the nitty-gritty of daily business was done. It was especially interesting to see how Commerzbank handles the new instrument of payment – bank payment obligations. I was given a very detailed explanation of the processes in place and the systems used. I also met some people from the financial institutions Africa team who shared their opinions on the current developments in the African markets with me.

In Paris the focus was mainly on trade business and I met people from both operations and sales.

“In the head office I had the chance to see how the nitty-gritty of daily business was done.”

All in all this was a fantastic experience that has taught me many things that I can take with me and apply to my everyday work in Tunisia. I would also like to express my gratitude to the EBRD and Commerzbank for this opportunity.

Five-day event in Vienna provides invaluable training and networking opportunity

The EBRD welcomed participants to the third Trade Facilitation Programme (TFP) workshop at the Joint Vienna Institute (JVI), which took place in Vienna on 3-8 May 2015. Twenty-three trade finance bankers from 16 countries attended the five-day event.

The aim was to offer participants a deeper understanding of the dynamics, risks and product structures at their disposal when helping their clients with their international trade business. Over the five days all the important aspects of trade finance were covered, from the basic to the more advanced. Programme director Ken Partenka of BankTFD Consulting kicked things off with sessions on business trends, leadership, management and decision-making skills. Then various trade experts – Andrea Hauptmann of Raiffeisen Bank International, Maximilian Burger-Scheidlin of JVI, Stephen Tricks of Practice V Legal, Paul Laffey of ICC International, Dora Ioannou of Credit Agricole, Angela Poulios of BankITC, Hellenic Bank, Cyprus, Ioannis Psaroudis of National Bank of Greece, Megabank, Ukraine, Dorin Ionescu, Supervisor of Letters of Credit, Hellenic Bank, Cyprus, from Spain, Stephen Tricks of Practice V Legal, and consultant Edith Rabusel – delivered lively and engaging seminars on topics such as warehouse financing, corruption, sanctions, letters of credit and effective teamwork.

The EBRD’s TFP team also gave an overview of its aims and activities, along with information on its e-learning and educational resources that have been developed in collaboration with the International Chamber of Commerce. While the knowledge imparted during the seminars was invaluable, just as important was the opportunity for attendees to mix with leading specialists from some of the EBRD’s most active issuing banks – a great and informal way to facilitate regional trade.

23 trade finance bankers from 16 countries attended the five-day event.

WHAT PEOPLE SAID

Thank you for this fantastical opportunity. The main benefit for me was to hear and exchange opinions with high-level specialists from the ICC and leading international banks, sharing their expertise and outlining market developments.

Igor Kudinov, Head of Documentary Operations, Megabank, Ukraine

The training was incredibly informative and made me see trade finance products from a different angle – especially regarding risk, which is very important to bankers.

Angarag Uurmbileg, Financial Institutions & Trade Finance Officer, Khan Bank, Mongolia

The most challenging part of our work is deciding how to handle a case that is not clear or that involves risk. Therefore the case studies and examples used in the workshop were invaluable.

Dora Ioannou, Supervisor of Letters of Credit, Hellenic Bank, Cyprus

CONFLICT OVER CONFIDENTIALITY

Dear Experts,

Our bank forwarded a presentation on behalf of our customer, the beneficiary, to an issuing bank demanding payment under a standby letter of credit issued subject to UCP 600. Our bank has no obligation under the standby as we are only an advising bank but we are the main finance provider to the customer for export sales, plus we support our customer in an advisory capacity. In our opinion the presentation demand was a complying demand. In fact, the standby letter of credit was quite simple, calling for only two documents:

- A statement of default issued by the beneficiary stating that payments were overdue and unpaid in respect of the contract covering delivery of a ZincChannel® model Z12 for an amount or up to US$ 700,000.
- A copy of the commercial invoice issued by the beneficiary indicating the specifications of the product delivered and its value.

The documents were presented at the issuing bank on the business day before the standby letter of credit expired.

The issuing bank issued a notice of refusal by SWIFT MT 734 on the fourth banking day following the receipt of the presentation, which was after the expiry date.

The notice of refusal stated one discrepancy as follows:

“Conflict between data in documents; statement of default stating delivery of ZincChannel® a Z12 demanding payment of USD700,000.00 whereas copy commercial invoice issued by the beneficiary indicates ‘specifications of the product delivered ZincChannel model Z12 reconditioned to a Z12 for a value USD687,000’.”

As a matter of urgency could you please clarify if the discrepancies noted by the issuing bank are valid, and set out whether the issuing bank has an obligation to pay under the standby or not?
